The right of women to be the users of the means of family planning and the right of women to participate in decisions about their health care are fundamental aspects of respect for human dignity. It is essential to ensure that women have access to safe and effective contraceptive methods, including sterilization, as well as information and education about family planning. This includes the right to access emergency contraception and post-abortion care.

Implementation and Monitoring

The right of women to be able to determine the number and spacing of their children is a basic human right. It is essential to ensure that women have access to comprehensive, voluntary, and free reproductive health services, including family planning, maternal health care, and reproductive rights education. This includes the right to access safe and legal abortion services in accordance with international human rights law.

Conclusion

Women’s rights, including their reproductive rights, are fundamental aspects of human dignity. It is essential to ensure that women have access to safe and effective contraceptive methods, information, and services, as well as the right to determine the number and spacing of their children. This includes the right to access emergency contraception and post-abortion care, and the right to access safe and legal abortion services in accordance with international human rights law.
