"One of the challenges of the 1970s was the rejection of prostitution as a business. The ban on sexual services led to a decline in the sector. However, in the early 1980s, prostitution reemerged, and new forms of exploitation emerged."

Wanne (2001) Global Consensus on Prostitution, No. 1.1.2

"In the Netherlands, as in most other countries, prostitution as such is illegal, but all forms of exploitation are forbidden. This was recognized in 1992, and the law was revised to prohibit brothels and other forms of exploitation."

POLICIES TOWARDS SEX CLUBS, WINDOW BROTHERS AND STRIP TOS

In the sex industry, clubs occupy a significant role. The presence of these clubs not only provides a place for sex workers to exchange information but also serves as a hub for patrons. The clubs are often referred to as "window shops" because they allow patrons to view potential partners from a distance. The clubs themselves are designed to attract customers, with bright lights and loud music creating an immersive environment.

The image shows a map of the location of sex clubs in a particular area. The Clubs are marked with a yellow dot on the map, indicating their proximity to residential areas. This information is useful for individuals seeking sex workers in the area. The map also highlights the concentration of clubs in certain neighborhoods, suggesting a potential business district for the sex industry.
